Rural School and Community Updates from the USED--- This September Is Attendance Awareness Month

The USED is excited to offer multiple support opportunities for school districts and state education agencies to reduce chronic absenteeism and promote attendance. Interested school districts are invited to join the Student Attendance and Engagement Solutions Network (Attendance Solutions

Network). The Attendance Solutions Network has been created to support districts' efforts to reduce chronic absence, increase student engagement, and build upon prevention strategies for the 2024-25 academic year and beyond. The Attendance Solutions Network is designed to provide technical assistance, research, and support to districts at no cost. To express your interest, please complete the 2024 Attendance Solutions Network Interest Form.

Also, the Office of Elementary and Secondary Education is offering access to resources on Supporting Student Attendance and Engagement. Download a quick reference resource titled Sustaining Efforts to Boost Regular Student Attendance that provides information on select federal education formula and discretionary funding and technical assistance to help school districts combat chronic absenteeism and boost everyday attendance. Additionally, access is available to new resources on this topic, including one from the National Partnership for Student Success titled Digital Backpack: Resources to Address Chronic Absenteeism in Your Community.

Tip of the Week

Disseminate Individual Educational Plans (IEPs) Before School Year Begins

Do not invite legal problems by telling parents that since it is the second day of the school year, teachers have not read every IEP. Districts must ensure students have an IEP in place from day one. Before the school year starts, confirm that each teacher received their students' IEPs and understands how to implement them. (Special Ed Connection®)
