

FIVE-PART SPEAKER SERIES

College Matters: What Students, Families, and Professionals Can Do to Support College Access and Success for Students with Intellectual and/or Developmental Disabilities.

What is College Matters?

Funded by the Florida Developmental Disabilities Council, College Matters is a five-part series of 1-hour conversations for secondary and postsecondary education personnel focusing on postsecondary education for students with IDD. Each speaker event will address a unique aspect of improving the pathways to success. Facilitated by Think College staff, and featuring a short presentation by a content expert, the series will provide participants with strategies to prepare and support students with IDD for college success and will allow time for discussion and resource sharing.

College Matters is designed to cover a broad range of topics critical to achieving successful postsecondary education in Florida. All sessions will be relevant to both secondary and postsecondary personnel, as well as anyone interested in promoting higher education for students with IDD!

How will this speaker series benefit me?

College Matters is intended to:

- Provide a series of easy-to-access training opportunities.
- Emphasize the implementation of concrete strategies for replication.
- Create a platform to better connect secondary education professionals with postsecondary education professionals across the state.

Featured speakers will include content experts from both across the country and within Florida, as well as staff from Think College at the Institute for Community Inclusion, University of Massachusetts Boston.
