

Identification of Critical Teacher Shortage Areas

Recommended Shortage Areas

This report identifies which certification areas are facing an unmet need of certified teachers using current data on teacher supply and demand. Using the information provided below, the recommended critical teacher shortage areas for the 2012-13 school year are as follows:

- Middle and High School Science
- Foreign Languages
- English/Language Arts
- Middle and High School Reading
- Exceptional Education
- Middle and High School Math
- English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL)

The shortage areas above represent certification types where substantial proportions of teachers are currently teaching or being hired to teach courses without the appropriate certification. This information can be used to determine the current and projected needs of classroom teachers for specific subject areas in the upcoming school year. The information used to determine these shortage areas is presented below.

Background

Section 1012.07, Florida Statutes, requires the State Board of Education to annually identify critical teacher shortage areas based on the recommendations of the Commissioner of Education. This list of shortage areas is used to identify high-need content areas and high-priority location areas using the following information:

1. The number and percentage of positions in each discipline filled by teachers not certified in the appropriate field;
2. The annual supply of graduates of state approved Florida teacher education programs for each discipline;
3. The number and percentage of vacant positions in each teaching discipline; and
4. Critical teacher shortage areas which may be identified pursuant to rules adopted by district school boards. These areas shall be identified based on consideration of at least the information specified in items 1 through 3 above and submitted to the Department no later than June 1st of each year.

In the 2011 legislative session, Senate Bill 736, the Student Success Act was passed to reform employment, compensation, and evaluation practices for educational personnel and school administrators in Florida's public schools. As part of this legislation, section 1012.07, F.S. was amended to provide further clarity on determining and identifying critical teacher shortage areas. Additionally, section 1012.22, F.S. was amended to include critical teacher shortage areas for consideration by school districts when determining and adopting a salary schedule or salary schedules as the basis for paying all school employees hired before July 1, 2014.

Calculating Shortage Areas

The critical teacher shortage areas for 2012-13 are calculated using information provided in exhibits 3 through 6 below. The Department ranked the information in each of the exhibits to create Exhibit 1.<sup>1</sup> Rankings are then averaged across all types of shortage data to provide a final ranking. This method provides the ability to compare different types of data that illuminate many aspects of teacher supply and demand.

Exhibit 1 – Summary of Critical Teacher Shortage Rankings for 2012-13.

Summary of Rankings
Subject Fields	Teacher Vacancies (Exhibit 4)	Teachers Hired Out-of-Field (Exhibit 3)	Courses Taught Out-of-Field (Exhibit 5)	Teacher Supply (Exhibit 6)	Average Rank	Final Rank
Science	2	5	3	5	3.75	1
Foreign Languages	7	3	6	1	4.25	2
English/Language Arts	3	6	1	8	4.50	3
Reading	5	2	N/A	7	4.67	4
Exceptional Education	1	4	5	9	4.75	5
Math	4	7	2	6	4.75	6
ESOL	9	1	N/A	N/A	5.00	7
Social Studies	6	10	4	N/A	6.67	8

Physical Education	11	8	N/A	3	7.33	10
Music	8	11	N/A	4	7.67	11

<sup>1</sup> The rankings order the data with one being the subject area that shows the most need for additional teachers. For example, when looking at Exhibit 6 the subject area with the fewest teachers produced would be ranked as number 1, but for Exhibit 5 the subject area with the most out of field courses would be ranked as number 1.

Information on Shortage Areas

Data on teachers currently in the workforce and their certification fields are presented below to provide context for the recommended critical teacher shortage areas. This information covers the content areas in which the majority of teachers are currently certified, the content areas in which teachers are being hired, and the proportion of new hires that are not appropriately certified. Additional information is provided on projected teacher vacancies, course offerings by appropriately certified teachers, and recent completers of teacher education programs in Florida. The following exhibits throughout the report provide information on teacher supply and demand.

Exhibit 2 - Total Number of Teachers by Certification Area

Exhibit 3 - Total Number of Newly Hired Teachers by Certification Area

Exhibit 4 - Total Number of Current and Projected Vacancies by Certification Area

Exhibit 5 - Number and Percentage of Courses Being Taught In-field and Out-of-field

Exhibit 6 - Number of Students Completing Teacher Education Programs

Exhibit 7 - High Priority School Locations and Courses Being Taught In-field and Out-of-field

As shown in Exhibit 2, the seven recommended critical teacher shortage areas are among the top 15 content areas based on the number of teachers certified and account for 29% of all certified teachers.

Exhibit 2 provides the total number of teachers by their primary certification area for the top 15 certification areas, as reported by school districts for the 2010-11 school year. Shortage areas are bolded in the exhibit below.

Exhibit 3 provides the total number of full-time equivalent new hires and the proportion of these new hires that were not appropriately certified, as reported by school districts for the 2010-11 school year. This information provides detail on the types of teachers that are currently in demand across all school districts and the proportions that are not appropriately certified when hired. Data on newly hired teachers highlight the teacher supply and demand issues districts face when attempting to fill positions with appropriately certified teachers. Districts prefer to hire appropriately certified teachers, so in areas such as Reading and ESOL where more than 25% of teachers were hired without the appropriate certification, the data indicates a likelihood that a shortage of appropriately qualified teachers exists. Some of the areas that are recommended as critical teacher shortage areas, such as Exceptional Student Education, do not have the highest percentages of new hires that are not appropriately certified. However, because the numbers of newly hired teachers in these areas are large, smaller percentages of teachers not appropriately certified still represent a large number of inappropriately certified new teacher hires. Shortage areas are bolded in the exhibit below.

Exhibit 4 provides the total number of current vacancies for the 2011-12 school year and the total number of projected vacancies for the 2012-13 school year by certification area. The recommended critical teacher shortage areas are among the highest projected vacancies for 2012-13. This information is typically used to plan recruitment efforts, including The Great Florida Teach In held annually in June. This highlights the anticipated subject areas of teacher demand seen across all school districts. Shortage areas are bolded in the exhibit below.

Exhibit 5 provides unduplicated course-level counts of teachers found teaching courses in-field and out-of-field. Course offerings are calculated at the school-level by each unique course number offered by a teacher. The information is then aggregated to overall certification areas, as shown below. This information helps determine which subject areas and individual course offerings are being taught in-field or out-of-field by a teacher and highlights the demand for certain subject areas by looking at the proportion of areas that may or may not be taught by an appropriately certified teacher. Although courses being taught out-of-field comprise 5% of all courses taught, the proportion of those occurring in critical shortage areas highlights the demand that districts face in finding appropriately qualified teachers. For example, 7.3% of all Language Arts courses were being taught by inappropriately certified teachers, the highest of all subject areas. Shortage areas are bolded in the exhibit below.

Exhibit 6 presents the most recent information on new completers from teacher education programs across Florida. In instances such as physics and chemistry, these programs are aggregated into one overall science category. This information indicates the available supply of new teachers graduating from preparation programs in Florida that may help address the current shortage areas. For example, Exhibit 5 indicates that approximately 700 math teachers are teaching out-of-field, yet in Exhibit 5 only 306 new math teachers were certified, indicating the supply will not address the entire demand. Shortage areas are bolded in the exhibit below.

Exhibit 7 provides information on the number of high priority school locations and the proportion of courses at those locations being taught by in-field and out-of-field teachers. Consistent with Florida Statute we have identified high-priority locations as high-density, low-economic urban areas, low-density, low-economic rural areas, and lowest performing schools. The lowest performing schools, per Florida Statute 1008.33, consist of the three lowest of six categories that identify schools in need of improvement, support, and intense interventions based on their performance. These three categories include Correct I, Correct II, and Intervene.

Low performing and low-economic urban schools have a higher proportion of courses taught by teachers without the appropriate certification. The exhibit below also highlights that lowest-performing schools experience progressively higher percentages of inappropriately certified teachers as their performance decreases. Schools identified as “Intervene” experience the largest proportion of out-of-field teachers. Similar to Exhibit 4, course offerings are calculated at the school-level by each unique course offered by a teacher. This information provides the context of high-need schools experiencing higher amounts of teachers not certified in the appropriate field for which they teach. The complete list of high priority school locations be found in Appendix A and Appendix B attached.
